The REAL Detroit: Behind the Blinds, Faces of Fear

By AL STARK

The convoy — a jeep followed by three trucks full of armed military personnel — stopped this morning and stopped on the bridge over the Fort Wayne Canal as the traffic light turned red. "Will you lock at that," exclaimed the sergeant driving one of the trucks. The soldier jumped out, then slammed the gate shut behind him. Everyone had broken into the Fort Wayne Canal.
Hospital Becomes Riot Command Post

By JOHN A. McGOLDRICK

The Motor City anti-riot command post is a cloudy yellow building at the corner of Bates and St. Antoine in Detroit. General Hospital, the riot epicenter, is a block away. It is the scene of much of the police activity. Several times a day, the police station is scenes of anti-riot command posts. The station is made of yellow bricks and has a brass covering on its front. It is called the "clown" because of the many stuffed animals and other decorations that are on its walls. The station is a hub of activity for police who are trying to quell the riots. The station is open 24 hours a day and is staffed by several officers at all times. The police are on constant patrol in the area, and there is a heavy police presence in the surrounding neighborhoods. The riot is the result of a series of events that began with the shooting of a black man by a white police officer. The shooting sparked a wave of protests and violence that have lasted for several days. The police are doing their best to keep the peace and to prevent further violence. They are working closely with the community to try to resolve the situation. The police are also working with the city hall to try to get the situation under control. The riot has caused widespread destruction and damage, and there are reports of looting and arson. The police are working to prevent further violence and to ensure the safety of the citizens of Detroit.

2 Drowned While Fishing

A Great Lakes fishery and a record crop of fish has made it necessary for the Michigan State Fish and Game Commission to issue a special decree which will provide for the conservation and protection of the fish. Under the provisions of the decree, the Secretary of the State Fish and Game Commission, W. F. Johnson, has issued an order that all fishing shall be closed at midnight on the 1st of June and reopen on the 1st of August. The order is intended to give the fish a chance to reproduce themselves.

Word From 12th: We Don’t Want to Talk

By JEROME AUGMENT

We are talking, but not about the happenings in Detroit. In fact, it seems as if the only thing we are talking about is Detroit. There are rumors of martial law, of curfews, of National Guard on the streets. But the truth is, we are not talking about any of these things. We are talking about our own experiences, our own thoughts, our own feelings. We are talking about the need for peace, for understanding, for dialogue. We are talking about the need for our voices to be heard, for our stories to be told. We are talking about the need for our community to come together, to work towards a common goal. We are not talking about the events in Detroit, because we are not in Detroit. We are talking about our own lives, our own communities, our own stories. Because that is what we are, and that is what we must be. We are not talking about the events in Detroit, because we are not in Detroit. We are talking about our own lives, our own communities, our own stories. Because that is what we are, and that is what we must be.

Civil Rights Movement Becomes a Rebellion

By JAMES B. BRESLIN

The phrase “Civil Rights Movement Becomes a Rebellion” was coined by the late Martin Luther King Jr. in 1967. It was a time of great change and upheaval, with the rise of the Black Power movement and the continuing struggle for civil rights. The phrase “Civil Rights Movement Becomes a Rebellion” captures the sense of the times and the sense of urgency. It was a time when the struggle for civil rights was at its peak, and the movement was at a critical juncture. The phrase “Civil Rights Movement Becomes a Rebellion” is a reminder of the power of the movement and the power of the people.

Of course, Detroit's slums are highlights of the city's landscape, and there is no better barometer of their condition than the crime rate. In recent years, the crime rate in Detroit has been on the rise, with a particularly sharp increase in the number of violent crimes.

The Detroit Police Department, like most other police departments in the city, is understaffed and overworked. The department is also underfunded, which makes it difficult for the police to carry out their duties effectively.

One of the main difficulties faced by the police is the lack of information about crimes.
There are many crime hotspots in Detroit, and the police often have problems identifying these areas.

The Detroit Police Department is particularly understaffed in the areas with the highest crime rates. This means that the police have to cover a large area with a small number of officers.

The police are also faced with the challenge of dealing with a large diversity of criminals, many of whom are involved in organized crime. The police department is often overwhelmed by the number of cases it has to investigate.

The Detroit Police Department is also overworked. The police are often required to work long hours, and there is little time for rest.

In addition to the problems faced by the police, there are also problems with the justice system. Many of the cases investigated by the police are never brought to trial, and many of those that are brought to trial are not ever resolved.

Despite these problems, the Detroit Police Department is working hard to make the city safer. The police are working to improve the information they have about crimes, and they are also working to increase the number of officers in the areas with the highest crime rates.

The police are also working to improve their working conditions, and they are working to make sure that the justice system is functioning properly.

In conclusion, the problems faced by the Detroit Police Department are serious, and they require a concerted effort from the police, the community, and the government to solve.

The Detroit Police Department is working hard to make the city safer, and with the help of the community, they are making progress.

But there is still a lot of work to be done, and the problems faced by the police are complex and difficult to solve.

All Banks in City Close Downtown, in Suburbs

In John Galt

The downtown banking district was deserted yesterday as 10 of 12 banks in the area were closed. In the suburban towns of Dearborn, River Rouge, Hamtramck, Eastpointe, Warren, and Roseville, all eight banks were closed.

The situation, of course, is not hopeless, but there are many who feel that the banks are acting too slowly.

Her name is Linda, and she has a habit of being in two rooms at once. Linda was in the living room when the fire started. Her mother, in the kitchen, was called to turn the oven off. Linda's room was on the top floor of the house.

When the fire broke out, Linda's family was asleep. Her mother was in the kitchen, and her father was in the living room. Linda's bedroom was on the top floor of the house. The fire started in the kitchen and quickly spread to the living room and then to Linda's bedroom.

The family called the fire department, and they arrived within minutes. The fire was put out quickly, but the damage was extensive. Linda's room was completely destroyed, and her family lost everything.

Linda's parents were in shock. They were worried about their daughter. They didn't know if she was alive or dead. They searched the house for her, but they couldn't find her.

The next day, the fire department came back to the house to investigate. They found Linda's body in her room. She had been asleep when the fire started, and she never woke up.

The family was devastated. They couldn't believe that something so terrible could happen. They were angry and saddened. They couldn't understand why this had to happen.

The family held a memorial service for Linda. They wanted to remember her and honor her memory. They also wanted to raise awareness about the dangers of fire and the importance of being prepared.

They learned that fire can happen anywhere, at any time. They learned that it's important to be prepared and to have a plan in case of an emergency. They learned that it's important to be aware of the risks and to take steps to prevent them.

They also learned that fire can be dangerous. They learned that it's important to be careful and to follow safety guidelines. They learned that it's important to be vigilant and to stay informed.

The family was grateful for the support of their community. They were grateful for the kindness and compassion of their friends and neighbors. They were grateful for the love and support of their extended family.

They were determined to stay strong and to move forward. They were determined to honor Linda's memory and to live their lives to the fullest. They were determined to make a difference in the world.

Detroit a City of Contrast in Rioting

by JEROME ALMENTE

Detroit has been described as a contrasting city. Trouble seems to occur in one part of the city while it remains peaceful in another. Different areas are dotted with white and black neighborhoods. Different groups of people live and work together, often in harmony.

In one area, there is a sense of security and normalcy. People go about their daily routines, shopping, working, and enjoying life. In another area, the atmosphere is more tense, with people on edge and fearful.

The contrast is apparent in the way people interact with each other. In one area, there is a sense of trust and mutual respect. In another, there is suspicion and fear.

The city is divided by racial tension, economic disparities, and social inequalities. The contrast is stark, with some areas thriving while others struggle.

Despite this, there is hope for a better future. People are working to bridge the gap between different groups, fostering understanding and cooperation.

The city is a mosaic of diversity, where different cultures and backgrounds coexist. The contrast is a reminder of the complexities of urban life, but also of the potential for unity and progress.

A Sense of Power?
Looters' Reasoning Explored

EDITORS NOTE: An anonymous reader wrote that he had seen a sign in the city that read: "Looters, don't loot." It was a sign that was supposed to deter people from taking advantage of the current situation.

SANDRA A. WEST
Looters can be rational. Looting may seem like a foolish and irresponsible act, but it can be understood as a rational response to the current situation. Looting can be seen as a way to acquire goods and services that are in short supply.

By DARRON H. WALT

There was a sense ofalamat behind the looters. They were acting out of frustration and a desire to gain something.

There is no reason to believe that the looters were being led by a group of criminals. They were acting out of necessity, driven by the same factors that have driven other people to take similar actions.

An Inferno of Fire Bombs, Looters

Madness Goes Unchecked—So Do a Mother’s Tears

By RICHARD A. AYAN

Some were laughing and joking. Others stared blankly, some wept silently. The women cried, wailing, for their fate the city had forsaken. Some looked to the sky, like living statues. Many died, but they waited no attention.

The scene was one of chaos and panic. The city was in turmoil, with fires raging out of control. The fire was a monster, consuming everything in its path.

Globe had just been hit by one of the worst fires in its history. The smoke was so thick, it filled the air, blinding anyone who tried to see. The heat was intense, causing even the hardiest to wilt in its grip.

In the photo at the right, a policeman, holding a riot gun on an arson suspect against the rear of the theater building near the scene of the fire on Grand River and Myrtle, one of the buildings rocked by a new outbreak of arson yesterday.

Entire block on Grand River Burns in Latest Rush of Fires

The damage mounted as a new rash of fires erupted yesterday afternoon in Detroit’s already-endured area. Black smoke billows from a car fire, now on Grand River, to the centennial rampage spread across the area, adding to the atmosphere of burned-out buildings. At right, the main Grand Boulevard shopping center building goes up in smoke. The fire was so intense, it seemed to devour everything in its path.

The smoke was thick, smothering the air. It was like being trapped in a nightmare, unable to move or think. The heat was unbearable, causing even the bravest to succumb.

The city was a wreck, with buildings collapsing and streets blocked by debris. The fire was a monster, consuming everything in its path.

Violence Stuns Negro Leaders

By JOSEPH TRICKLAND

Detroit, Mich., March 6

Negro leaders here today announced that a group of Negroes was sentenced today to 30 days in jail for an alleged attempt to burn the home of a white man.

The Negro leaders said the home of the man was located in the heavily Negro district of Detroit.

They also said the Negroes had been warned by authorities not to make any further disturbances.

How Negro Stations Are Covering Big Story

Detroit’s Negro-owned radio stations are covering the riot’s devastation by “dampening the sound”.

At WJLB, Martin Jean the Queen (Dumont) has put in many hours on the air urging her listeners to stay in. No network, the general manager, said his station had received advice from more miltary listeners because of “the cool” policy.

At WOR, William S. J. a vice-president, has been doing “a lot of talking”.

Ministerial Group Seeks Race Equity

GRAND RAPIDS — Twelve Grand Rapids Negro ministers, tired of an opinion of racial inequity in the city, have formed a committee to seek to correct it.

These ministers, at a meeting today, said they felt Negroes were in the city’s schools, business and government, but still were not equal.

A major effort of the group will be an economic survey of the city to determine the status of Negroes.

Text of LBJ Troop Order

WASHINGTON—The following is the text of President Johnson's television statement on sending troops into Detroit.

"Orders Troops to Move in—Speaking before a nationwide radio and television audience, President Johnson says he has ordered federal troops to the city of Detroit. Appearing with the Presidnet are (left to right) FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, Secretary of the Army Stanley Resor, Air Force Sec. Ryan Clark, Defense Secretary Robert McNamara and Gen. Harold Johnson, Army chief of staff.

In the early evening today Governor Romney communicated with Attorney General Ramsey Clark and told him of the extreme disorder in Detroit. The attorney general kept me informed throughout the situation.

At 10:30 this morning I received a call from Governor Romney officially informing me of the federal troops being dispatched to the city. The call was between 10:30 and 11:00.

At 10:45 I instructed the secretary of defense to move the troops into the city.

I also advised the Governor that immediately Mr. Cyrus Vance as special assistant to the President on security and defense affairs and the Governor and the General and the local police officials are informed of the immediate situation.

They described the situation as serious and report that the violence and disorder that occurred in the past few hours, and sustained and unceasing attacks on law enforcement officers threaten the safety of the people and the destruction of property. The troops are being dispatched to the city to support the local police officials in maintaining order and to prevent further damage to public property.

Whites ‘Adopt’ Negro Victims

Suburbia Opens Hearts, Doors

BY NANNY CHADWICK

The news that the Bush family would be moving into a white suburb was greeted with a mix of excitement and trepidation in the predominantly black neighborhood where they lived. The Bushes had been living in a run-down house on the outskirts of town, which had been frequented by gangs and drug dealers. The neighborhood had been in a state of tension for months, with police raids and protests becoming more common.

The Bush family was not without their own problems. George Bush, the patriarch of the family, had been a successful businessman before his entry into politics. However, his business ventures had left him with a fortune that he was reluctant to share with his family. His wife, Barbara, was a homemaker who had never worked outside the home.

The Bush family had three children, two sons and a daughter. The sons, George Jr. and Jeb, were in their late teens and early twenties, while the daughter, Barbara, was in her late twenties. The family had faced criticism for their wealth and their perceived lack of concern for the community around them.

The move to a white suburb was seen as an attempt to distance themselves from the problems of the neighborhood. However, the family faced resistance from the community, who saw the move as a rejection of their way of life.

Federal Troops Here

Battle-Tested Pros

BY TONY JUVEY

The news of the impending arrival of federal troops to Detroit sent shockwaves through the city. The troops, who had been battle-tested in Vietnam, were seen as a necessary measure to prevent further violence.

The troops were sent in to keep the peace and to protect the lives of those who were still in danger. However, many Detroiters were concerned about the implications of the presence of federal troops in their city.

Border Reopens

Many Detroiters Flee to Windsor

Many Detroiters who had been living in fear of violence decided to take advantage of the opening of the border and flee to Windsor, Canada. The border had been closed for months due to the anti-violence protests. However, many felt that they had no choice but to leave in order to ensure their safety.

Aid Comes From Suburbs

BY CHARLES SCHRAMM

The Detroit Aid Center, which had been set up to provide food and other necessities to those affected by the violence, received a substantial donation from the suburban community.

The donation was made by the local residents, who were deeply concerned about the plight of those affected by the violence. They had organized a drive to collect food and other supplies, and had managed to gather a significant amount of aid.

The donation was a welcome relief to those who had been struggling to make ends meet in the aftermath of the violence. However, many were still concerned about the future of the community and the possibility of further violence.

The people taking refuge at the Salvation Army center are not the only ones who have noticed the presence of something unfamiliar in their midst. In a hall at the center, a man in a Salvation Army uniform has been seen standing, staring at the floor as if expecting something to happen. The man, who some say is a former ghost hunter, believes that the spirits of the past are still present in the hall.

Tanks, Troops Fight Snipers; Toll Now 35

In a more than 100-hour battle to protect their neighborhoods from snipers, Detroit residents were relieved by a truce that allowed them to escape to safety. But the battle was far from over, as snipers continued to target civilians and police alike.

The attack, which began early Sunday morning, was the result of a national insurgency that had been gaining momentum for weeks. Snipers had been sniping at Detroit residents for days, with little respite from the violence.

A few hours after the truce, snipers began to target police officers, and the battle raged on for another week. The situation was dire, with the city in ruins and many residents left homeless.

Woman Killed Watching Gun Duel

A woman was killed while watching a gun duel in downtown Detroit. The woman, a resident of the area, had been walking along the Detroit River when she witnessed the duel.

The duel, which had been going on for several hours, was between two rival labor unions. The woman had been standing on the shore, watching the duel from a safe distance.

As the duel reached its climax, one of the men in the duel turned his gun on the woman, who was standing nearby. She was shot in the head and died instantly.

Guerrilla War Fought on 12th

The battle for Detroit continued with a guerrilla war fought on the 12th. Snipers had been sniping at police officers and civilians alike, and the situation was dire.

A sniper squad had been stationed on the rooftops of nearby buildings, sniping at police officers and civilians alike. The police were under constant attack, with snipers taking cover behind cars and buildings.

The situation was desperate, with police officers and civilians alike taking cover behind cars and buildings. The battle continued for several hours, with snipers targeting police officers and civilians alike.

New York Looters Raid Fifth Avenue Stores

At least 1,000 men in uniform, including police, firemen, and National Guardsmen, converged on Fifth Avenue yesterday, and several chains of stores, including Saks Fifth Avenue, were looted.

The Nasba store was hit particularly hard, with its windows shattered and goods scattered everywhere. The scene was chaotic, with people running in and out of the stores, trying to grab anything they could find.

A protest march was held in front of the stores, with hundreds of people shouting slogans and holding signs. However, the authorities were quick to respond, and within minutes the area was cleared.

The General Post Office was set on fire, and a number of other buildings were damaged.

Jails Filled; New Lockups Sought

By HERBERT A. BOLDT

ONTARIO, Feb. 6—Conditions at the Johnstown, Washington County, jail are so bad that the county commissioners are considering the possibility of building a new jail in the county seat.

The jail, which was built in 1910, has become overcrowded and is in need of repair. The county commissioners have been discussing the possibility of building a new jail for several years, but have been unable to come to a decision.

The commissioners are now considering the possibility of building a new jail in the county seat because of the overcrowding at the Johnstown jail.

In the meantime, the county commissioners have asked the state for assistance in solving the problem of overcrowding at the Johnstown jail.
Everyone’s Suspect in No-Man’s-Land

By Jon Lowell

"The commonplace because the natives in the run-on streets of Detroit.

Snipers fire at police — and police take no chances with anyone, sniper or innocent pedestrian.

People walked the streets in the neighborhoods where there has been arson, sniping or looting.

They’re often searched, bound against the wall, and ordered on after way in silent language.

At the police command post at Herman Keener branch of Detroit General Hospital, for example, people are harassed by sniper fire for two days.

A Negro man carrying a bag of groceries finds himself staring at a police car as he tries to enter an apartment house nearby. The bag, latter, contains food — the food first sent out for themselves. They don’t like the man’s word for it.

Occasionally, there are flashes of hate during such encounters.

Furthermore, the city, a young Negro leaving a hurried Ford plant at the gunners who are searching him.

"What’s going on with the gun, Windows?"

For another reason, it’s a gunners’ town.

A heavy set Negro is walking down Grand River.

"You got nothing for her, Faster, boy. You run out of here."

The Negro lifts a few pints, resumes his weary stride and the German shoveling against the building, watching the street.

The mood of the men enforcing the law varies.

Last night, a News reporter and photographer were driving down Grand River in a bright red car with "Detroit News" emblazoned on the sides. It had a radio telephone and was loaded with camera equipment.

Obviously serious national guard officers ordered everybody out and searched the area. They had to be sure, they said.

At some other sniping blocks, the guard troops and Negro citizens seem to be in line with a reason.

The guardsmen order the car to halt and turn it to light fire.

A young Richmond walks in street sized eye in the mouth of the street. The police order the car to halt.

Military and police are checking and searched.

Members of the better-traveled regular Army personnel seem to have taken more of a truce in the areas they are patrolling.

There is a greater sense of security.

Most Negroes in the areas where the snipers have struck are afraid. And those who are marching their stores and the small percentage among them who are protesting a tragedy.

While residents of the comfortable suburbs are afraid.

Whoever it ends, all they have at least one thing in common, nothing to talk about.

The Devastation
From Way, Way Up

Visible in this aerial photo are burned-out buildings in the Clairmont 12th street vicinity where Detroit's rioting depicted four days ago. The scene of the rioting lies in (1) Herman Kerner branch of Detroit General Hospital, which was the target of sniping fire yesterday afternoon. (2) Junior High School, which was also under sporadic fire. and the school's playground (3) where the lights were shot out by police Tuesday night in an attempt to control violence.
The Lodge Freeway runs across the top edge of the photo.

Sniping
Ties Up
Freeway

With materials flowing down to watch a gun battle between snipers and authorities in the war command post at Herman Kerner branch of Detroit General Hospital, a traffic jam is created on the northbound Lodge from Clairmont back to downtown. Autos positioned on the Ford Freeway were tied up at the Lodge interchange.
Officers said part of the reason for the delay was the increase in the number of persons returning to work yesterday.
Sunday Morning on 12th Street

Did Restraint Fail?

Don't talk about restraint, it seems to me. In the 12th Street area, restraint, once customary, is now the exception. Yesterday, police chief O'Connell was heard to remark that the situation was about as bad as it has been in years. By the time the right wing of the crowd got out of hand, the police had been on the scene for about 45 minutes. The police chief was heard to say that the situation was about as bad as it has been in years.

There were no marked disturbances yesterday. But there was a noticeable increase in the number of people buying and selling property in the area. Some said they bought property because they thought the price was reasonable, while others said they bought property as a precaution against further violence.

The police chief was heard to say that the situation was about as bad as it has been in years. He mentioned that there had been a marked increase in the number of people buying and selling property in the area.
